FROM SAN ANTONIO.

Aug. Hornung, a well known manufacturer of boots and shoes at 820 Nolan St., San Antonio, Texas, will not soon forget his experience with an attack of the cramps which he relates as follows: "I was taken with a violent cramp in the stomach, which I believe would have caused my death, had it not been for the prompt use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The first dose did me so much good that I followed it up in 20 minutes with the second dose, and before the Doctor could get to where I was, I did not need him. This Remedy shall always be one of the main stays of my family." For sale by all dealers, BEXSON, SMITH & Co., agents for the Hawaiian Islands.

The flag of the U. S. S. Charleston was half-masted immediately after her arrival in the harbor, out of respect to the memory of the late Prince Consort. The Charleston left San Francisco August 20th.

MR JOHN D. SPRECKELS arrived on the Alameda, for a respite from the exacting business of his firm. He is accompanied by Mrs. Spreckels. They are very welcome guests to our sunny isles, in which Mr. Spreckels has great pecuniary interests.

CAPTAIN J. W. MUDSON, who was well known on this coast, died at Honolulu on May 9th last. He formerly resided at Seattle, where he owned considerable property, and left $15,000 to the Salvation Army of that town.—S. F. Sea and Shore.

A DRAY with a double team, standing near C. Brewer & Co's store, was frightened this morning by the blowing of the whistle of the steamer C. R. Bishop, docked near by. The horses streaked up Queen street and were only stopped by colliding with a telephone post. Slight damages to the pole and harness were the result.

RESPECT to the memory of the late Prince Consort was shown in this city by the half-masting of the national colors on the various public buildings and foreign legations and consulates, closing of all Government offices, and principal business places. The U. S. S. Charleston half-masted her colors as was also done on the shipping in the harbor.

MR BEN HOGAN will deliver his free lecture this evening in the Y. M. C. A. hall. On Saturday evening he will give his famous picturesque stereoptical exhibition in the same hall. The scenery in this exhibition is considered the best in America. The proceeds will be devoted to the carrying on of gospel meetings. Fifty cents admission.

A NOTED character in his way died at the Queen's Hospital and was buried yesterday. Jack Smith followed the sea on both the Atlantic and Pacific as a cook. He ran on the Panama line of steamers. He was chief cook under Steward Cowles on the S. S. Australia, coming ashore sick three months ago. His age was about 60, and he belonged to Petaluma, Cal.

Y. M. C. A.

The regular monthly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held yesterday evening at their hall, about fourteen members being present. Mr. Geo. P. Castle occupied the chair. After prayer by Mr. J. E. Bidwell, the reports of the several committees were received and placed on file. The reports for the most part noted progress in their different branches of work.

General Secretary Peck said the services held at the hall were well attended, and the reading rooms also. Mr. J. E. Bidwell for the visitation committee reported that he and others had visited ships in the harbor, and had distributed tracts among the seafaring men. On the bark Gamen he had met with a Y. M. C. A. man of good standing. Mr. Bidwell also reported that he had supplied a large family with food.

Mr. A. C. Lovekin, treasurer, being absent, his report was read by the Secretary, and showed receipts $402.31, disbursements $269.60, balance on hand $132.71. Seven members were admitted to the membership of the association. At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Ben Hogan made a few remarks on the course he will take in the formation of a temperance organization, which he intended should be under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

A SECOND SORROW

Death of His Royal Highness the Prince Consort.

In Owen Dominis Passes Quietly Away—The Closing Scene—A Tale of a Remarkable Career.

The community was notified, by an item in the BULLETIN, on the 26th inst., that the condition of H. R. Highness the Prince Consort was regarded as precarious, and the statement was presented on good authority. A noted seeming change for the better on the evening of the same date caused Her Majesty's Chamberlain to be sent to another paper to counteract the anxiety felt in the previously reported condition of the sick Prince. Therefore the public were both surprised and shocked when the sad news reached their ears that the well known and respected Governor John Owen Dominis, the Prince Consort, had solved the great mystery.

A BULLETIN representative was immediately at the house of mourning in Washington Place, and learned that Governor Dominis had died within a few minutes of 5 o'clock. Those present at the mournful scene were: Her Majesty the Queen (whose womanly nature held full sway at the sudden unexpected presence of the all-conqueror), their Excellencies the Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Hon. Samuel Parker, and the Attorney-General, W. Austin Whiting; Major Seward, Dr. Frouseau, the family physician, Dr. Lutz, consulting physician, and two attendants.

Her Majesty the Queen, who had the best of hopes for the recovery of her husband, and who had been informed but a few hours previous, by one of the attending physicians, of the seeming improved condition of the patient, was present (as has been her custom since her return from Waianae) at the family residence in Washington Place, and had in her sympathetic, kind way, personally attended to the wants of the Prince. She was engaged yesterday afternoon, in company with Mrs. C. B. Wilson, Mrs. Aldrich and Mrs. Clark, ladies-in-waiting, in arranging some of the details connected with the festivities proposed to be held on her coming birthday, September 2nd, and the consultation was being had in a room adjoining the sick chamber. Suddenly, and without the slightest warning, Dr. Frouseau stepped into the room and addressing Her Majesty said, in hurried words, "Madam, I believe your husband is dying; your presence is required."

One of the gentlemen who had been present in the sick chamber stated that within three minutes from the time Her Majesty entered the room, with Dr. Frouseau, the spirit of John Owen Dominis had taken its flight to the realms beyond and that the death seemed painless.

The suddenness of the final, unlooked for event, may be judged when it is learned that Their Excellencies Premier Parker and Attorney-General Whiting made their call at 4:45, as one of courtesy, never expecting that the wings of the death angel were being spread over their loved friend's couch at the moment of their entrance, nor that their mission would be one of condolence and mourning, and their duties such as became from the respect due to the manes of a dead Prince of the realm.

Only a few minutes elapsed after the death of the Prince Consort, before the news got abroad and intimate friends paid call, amongst the first to arrive being: His Excellency the Minister of Interior, C. N. Spencer; Minister of Finance, Hon. J. Mott Smith; Chief Justice Judd, Marshal Wilson, Hon. J. O. Carter, Hon. W. James Smith, Mr. Paul Isenberg, Mr. Frank Godfrey and a BULLETIN representative. Later there arrived Prince Kawanakoa and Prince Kalaniana'ole, Hon. J. A. Cummins, Mr. F. P. Hastings, Col. C. P. Iaukea, Col. J. D. Holt, Jr., Mr. Walter Hill, Mr. C. A. Brown, Mr. C. H. Clark, Deputy Marshal Mehlert, Messrs. A. Fernandez, J. U. Kawai, Junius Kahe, W. J. Lane, Judge Hoopili, and a large number of others including several ladies.

Captain Samuel Nowlin, commandant of the Royal Barracks, detailed a guard of honor, consisting of 40 men, under command of Lieutenant Kanha and Fear for duty on the premises. Marshal Wilson also detailed a squad of officers from his department for police duty. After consultation with the Ministers of the Government, all of whom were present, Her Majesty decided that the body of the Prince Consort should be taken from the family residence to the Royal Palace. At 9:15 p. m. Undertaker Williams arrived with a hearse, and the corpse, which had been dressed in the uniform of the rank of Governor of Oahu, was placed therein, and was conveyed to the Palace, Marshal Wilson and Deputy Mehlert (preceded at some distance by carriages containing Her Majesty and Prince Kawanakoa and Kalaniana'ole), leading the mournful cortege. The Ministers and gentlemen previously mentioned fell into line in rear of the hearse, the soldiery, under command of Capt. Nowlin, forming single file on each side of the hearse and acting as a guard of honor. Thus formed the great procession wended its way from Beletania street along Richard street to the Palace grounds, and to the main entrance of the Palace itself. Here a halt was made and Major J. W. Robertson, Her Majesty's Chamberlain, came down the Palace steps to receive the body. Minister Parker and Marshal Wilson, with Col. John D. Holt, Jr., Chas. H. Clark, W. J. Lane and J. Aholo lifted and carried the simply shrouded body into the Throne room where it was placed. Her Majesty stood at the side of the yet uncovered corpse of her dead spouse, for a long time in silence, an occasional sob indicating the pent-up feelings which she strove to conceal. At last Her Majesty signified her desire for seclusion and the many who had come thither as silent mourners retired, when, at 9:30 p. m., Queen Liliuokalani was left in silent communion and alone with her dead.

The first illness which confined the Prince Consort to his residence was an attack of gout, an old enemy which he had often met before and fought off. This attack of gout, however, turned into inflammatory rheumatism and, as previously related, just when Governor Dominis was supposed to be recovering from that latter illness he became a victim to the deadly pneumonia of which he died.

The lying in state.

According to the official announcement the body of the dead Prince Consort was laid in state this morning, in the beautiful Throne room of the Palace. The general public was received from 10 to 11, and representatives of the diplomatic and consular bodies and Government employees from 11 till 12 o'clock. The household troops in full number lined the front of the Palace and the Royal Hawaiian Band occupied a position near the steps and played appropriate music during the hours of lying in state. Callers were received at the entrance by Major James W. Robertson, Her Majesty's Chamberlain, and ushered into the chamber of death, passed by the dead Prince, and left by one of the maids of honor.

The body was dressed in the habiliments of a general and laid, unclothed, on one of the famed feather cloaks which covered the resting place. At the head, on a cushion, were placed several insignia of rank and the sword of the deceased. At the feet, watching the remains of their loved brother, was a deputation from the Masonic lodge of the city. The members of Her Majesty's Ministry occupied seats at the head of the corpse and arranged behind them were Her Majesty's ladies-of-honor and lady relatives of the Ministers. To the right were seated representatives of the Supreme Court and prominent citizens.

A guard of honor, composed of Colonels and officers of Her Majesty's staff stood at the four corners of the catafalque, while, on either side of the body, were details of kahlil bearers who moved their feathered wands in constant unison. A beautiful flowered design of a harp, surrounded by two white doves, occupied a position near the dais and fragrant flowers were arranged in bouquets, around the room. Her Majesty sought seclusion in the Blue room. The ceremony of the lying in state ended at noon and preparations were soon after made and completed for the temporary enshining of the Royal corpse.

Although nothing definite had been settled on, at the time of this writing, of the date of the funeral, it is very probable that the final ceremonies will take place on Sunday, Sept. 6th.

Life of the late Prince.

John Owen Dominis was born at Schenectady, New York, March 10, 1832, hence was at his death in his sixtieth year. His father was an Italian, his mother an American lady from Boston. The late Prince came here with his parents when a child, his father being a master mariner on vessels voyaging in the Atlantic and Pacific. Capt. Dominis came to this port for the last time in the schooner Swallow. He sold that vessel here and sailed in 1850 as a passenger on the brig Henry for China. Another sea captain was a fellow passenger, but notwithstanding the three navigators on board the brig Henry never reached her destination. It was supposed she was caught in a typhoon and foundered. Up till her death in 1889 the disconsolate widow never quite gave up hope of her husband returning some day.

The subject of this sketch went to school in the Chiefs' School under the late Mr. Cooke, father of Messrs. C. M. and A. F. Cooke. He next heard of attending the Royal School, an institution that succeeded the Chiefs' School as a select school. This was about all the schooling J. O. Dominis had, excepting that he took special lessons in music, perhaps also some other branches, in the Priests' School under Mgr. Migret, Bishop of Alathia. He became a rather proficient musician, and for a time led the praise service on the harmonium in the old Bethel Union Church.

Mr. Dominis was one of the migrants from California in the rush thither that followed the discovery of gold. In '49 he was a book-keeper in San Francisco, entering the service of S. H. Williams & Co., and subsequently being engaged by Theodore Shillaber & Co., the Mr. Shillaber having been formerly a merchant in Honolulu. It is said Mr. Dominis was also in the employ of G. B. Post of San Francisco. Hon. W. F. Allen, our fellow-townsmen, first met the late Governor in San Francisco, forty-one years ago, having carried a letter of introduction to him from his mother.

Returning from California in 1850, John O. Dominis went into the employ of Chas. Brewer, where he was book-keeper until he was appointed private secretary to Kamehameha IV., a position that he also filled under Kamehameha V. The latter appointed him Governor of Oahu, an office that he held for over 20 years, until it was abolished. Part of the time he was also Governor of Maui. At the last session of the Legislature the office of Governor was restored, largely as an honorary distinction, but the only one appointed was Governor Dominis of Oahu. The Governor was a member of the House of Nobles under the life tenure of the Constitution abrogated in 1887, he having been appointed by Kamehameha V. He occupied various other public offices at different times.

John Owen Dominis and Miss Lydia K. Paki were married on the 16th of September, 1862, by the late Rev. S. C. Damon, D. D., at the residence of Hon. C. R. Bishop, King street, now the Hamilton House. This was in the reign of Kamehameha IV. His wife became a Princess on the accession of her brother, the lamented Kalakaua, in 1874. Shortly after Princess Liliuokalani's accession to the throne this year, she proclaimed her husband as a prince of the realm.

Governor Dominis was the chief promoter of the organization of the Royal Hawaiian Band in 1870, being assisted by the present Minister of Finance. He went with the late King to the United States on the U. S. S. Benicia in 1874, going as far as Washington. In 1887 the Governor accompanied the now Queen Dowager Kapiolani and the present Queen to England, where they attended the jubilee celebration of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. An incident in his life was his appointment, January 23, 1872, of Hon. D. Kalakaua, to be Governor in his stead, during his temporary absence from Oahu. Governor Dominis was a Free Mason of the 33d degree. He was the holder of all the chief Hawaiian and several foreign decorations.

The lamented Prince was the contemporary of five reigning sovereigns with every one of whom he exercised a strong influence. His counsels were born of an excellent judgment, and he had rare tact in impressing others with his views. Few people are aware of the beneficial service that Governor Dominis has time and again rendered the country. His retiring disposition and unostentatious manner prevented him from receiving a title of the praise that was due to him as a public man.
